policy makers and cultural managers.

The Journal is based on a multidisciplinary perspective and aims to connect theory and practice in the realm of the cultural sector. The submitted papers regard different fields: culture and creativity, cultural management, cultural policies, marketing, local development, entrepreneurship, and education applied to the cultural sector. This new publication also aims to be a platform for multidisciplinary debate and new perspectives among researchers.

Issue 1 carries 7 articles selected by an international Advisory Board made up of 19 well established researchers and experts from 10 countries. This online Journal responds to the increasing need to align education in cultural management and cultural policy with research being conducted in the field. It will certainly contribute to improving the knowledge and the capabilities for crafting advanced cultural policies and cultural management systems at the European level and beyond.
