Prof. Herman Van Eyken,

Project Chair and Curator, presenting the Lessons in Film at the CILECT Conference 2011[/caption]

Comprising a series of in depth interviews with some of the world's foremost film personalities, this project was an initiative of the International Association of Film and Television Schools \(CILECT\) and it was co-financed by the Asia-Europe Foundation \(ASEF\). The project also benefited from the support of RITS, Erasmushogeschool Brussel (Belgium), The Puttnam School of Film, LASALLE College of the Arts, Singapore, the Griffith Film School, Queensland College of Art, Brisbane (Australia), The National Film and Television School, Beaconsfield, UK and the Centro Sperimentale Di Cinematografia, Rome, Italy.

Masters in their field, carefully selected from the world's foremost screen-writers, producers, directors, cinematographers, editors, documentary film makers and production designers the subjects were intensively researched and then interviewed specifically by other producers, directors, directors of photography, editors, documentary film makers, production designers, in order to have them talk about the core of their craft and the personal choices they have made to succeed in their chosen field. These interviews were recorded live and edited into a 10 in 1 DVD-box and distributed not only to film schools but also circulated to all training centers and professional networks of independent film makers involved in this initiative.

The interviews were done by the students of the above mentioned schools and Professor Herman Van Eyken, Project Chair and Curator of the "Lessons In Film", and presently head of Griffith Film School, Queensland College of Art.

Articulating the challenges to conduct these series of interviews but also their educational value, Prof. Herman Van Eyken underlined the following while addressing its audience:

"Do not consider this as an attempt to make cinema, nor documentaries, these are just assembled interviews, done by film students for other film students or young film professionals, with interesting film makers who wanted to share their core of their craft, and give it all away for free to all of you."

The objective of these interviews was to bring to light some insights on film making from professionals in the sector that are willing to share their experiences and provide some food for thought for film students or young film professionals.
