The Call for Entries for the FutureEverything Award 2011 is now open. It recognises outstanding achievement for innovation in art, science & technology. Also an open call for art proposals for FutureEverything Festival.

“The FutureEverything Award celebrates the creative imagination that will shape our future.” Drew Hemment, Director

The FutureEverything Award recognises outstanding achievement for innovation in art, society & technology. It celebrates creative projects in any medium that offer a new and unique way to experience or see the world and help to bring the future into the present.

The winner receives a £10,000 cash prize and the FutureEverything Trophy.

DEADLINE - FutureEverything Award applications: 31 October 2010

FutureEverything Festival, to be held in Manchester, UK in May 2011, also makes an open call for art proposals. The Art Themes 2011 are: FutureMobilities, Global & Connected, OpenEverything, FutureEverybody and Handmade. See website for all details.

DEADLINE - FutureEverything Festival art proposals: 24 October 2010
FutureEverything is an art, technology and social innovation organisation established in 1995 in the UK that runs year-round innovation labs and an annual festival of art, music and ideas in Manchester.
