Call for articles on art in rural areas for new publication

IETM announces an international call for contributions for a new publication on art in rural areas, in the Fresh Perspectives series. The publication will be a part of our bigger endeavour to ensure the recognition of the role arts play in rural areas and to put forward effective solutions to support artists and cultural professionals meeting various challenges when working in rural and peripheral districts.

You can help us make an inspiring and convincing publication by telling us about your project(s) which you have developed / are developing in a rural area and by sharing your experience, including specific challenges, of working in and with rural communities.

Please reply briefly to the questions on the form below, and our research team will get in touch with you if we need more details.

Submit contribution

Submissions deadline: 28 June

We would appreciate a lot if you could spread this survey among your peers, so that we could collect as many relevant examples of art projects in rural areas as possible and make sure art professionals from different parts of the world can benefit from our research and advocacy.
