Austrian Museum of Applied Arts

MAK – Museum of Applied Arts stands for the fruitful combination of the past with the future, something which can be clearly sensed and experienced when visiting its extensive collection, large exhibition halls, themed special exhibitions and discourse-centered program of events.

Bringing together applied arts, design, architecture, and contemporary art is one of the museum's core competencies.

With a collection of applied and contemporary art, the MAK serves a dual purpose as a conservator of significant art objects and as a center for the scientific research of art with a special emphasis on its production, preservation, and reorientation. The MAK regards itself as a laboratory of artistic production and a research center of social awareness. MAK also develops research projects and hosts an online Collection where art-works in the Museum are accesible to viewers worldwide.
