Modulab is a creative technology lab that explores the relationship between design, culture, society and media developing immersive experiences for a large scale audience through design and technology.

Since 2008, Modulab has produced a series of technology intensive installations, interactive surfaces and experimental displays based on worldwide innovative solutions, most of which have been exhibited in local and international new media art venues. With over 10 years experience in prototyping, Modulab has developed several innovative products and solutions such as the first volatile medium projection, the first elastic multi-touch surface and other in-house innovative projects. The studio experiments with humanoid robots, making its own version of Inmoov, and swarm robots. Since 2016 Modulab is the top of mind in interactive installations for museums, festivals, immersive marketing campaigns and brand activations, developing also cultural events at the intersection of art, technology and science.
