The Moscow International Performing Arts Centre (MIPAC), also known as the Moscow International House of Music, is a public cultural complex which aims at organising performances of national and foreign symphony orchestras, chamber ensembles, solo instrumentalists, opera singers, ballet dancers, theatre companies, jazz bands, variety and traditional ensembles. It was opened in 2003.

It accommodates 3 concert halls placed on 3 different levels and having separate entrances. Each hall is executed in its own style and special array. The rows of seats ascend up in a form of an amphitheatre. There is also a summer terrace on the podium of MIPAC designed for different open-air promenade concerts and festive events.
