Prague Writers' Festival

Prague Writers' Festival – Mezinárodní festival spisovatelů
Pražský festival vznikl v Londýně v Keats House, kde na konci 70. let 20. století jeho zakladatel začal mezinárodní čtení poezie pozváním spisovatelů z střední a východní Evropy. Založil festivaly a čtení poezie v Keats House – vydával a představoval

George Theiner, editor of Index on Censorship, the work of great poets such as Vladimír Holan – before moving the readings to the Arts Theatre and Donmar Warehouse Theatre.

From 1983, they became the “Covent Garden Readings”. In February 1989, he brought “Child of Europe” to the National Theatre, presenting poets from eight communist countries, at a decisive moment. The Festival was broadcast on television and radio, and praised in the press. In May 1991, he moved the readings to Prague. The Prague Writers’ Festival is based on philosophical principles that allows for changes.
