Thailand Cultural Centre

Thailand Cultural Centre is a performing-arts venue in Bangkok, Thailand. Built with a grant from Japan, the Thailand Cultural Centre opened on October 9, 1987 as part of celebrations for King Bhumibol's 60th birthday. The Thailand Cultural Centre was established under the cooperation between the Government of Japan and Thailand. However since March 11, 1987, Thai Government has become fully responsible for all administrative and organizational aspects of the Centre.

Thailand Cultural Centre, a division of the Office of the National Culture Commission, Ministry of Education, is an important institution which primarily deals with organizing cultural services for the benefit of the general public.

Principles:

1. to serve as a place to provide learning opportunity in regard of culture to the general public with various training course, lecture, seminars, etc.
2. to serve as a place for cultural and recreational activities providing theatrical performances, concerts, exhibitions of arts and crafts, etc.
3. to encourage the general public to participate in creative recreational at all levels.
4. to make cultural information in formats of publications, audio-visual materials, displays and counselling service available for the general public.

It is fully integrated venue for social education and cultural activities.
